"Oracles, true for than oak,
Or dove, or tripod, ever spoke."

What the lawyers don't need the Goulds can have.

It would have done Nancy Hanks a whole lot more good if somebody had thought to repair her humble cabin while she was raising Abe.

The consent to the third term which White House silence appears to give simplifies the problem of the Democrats who are now presented with an opportunity to end the rivalries of ambitious politicians and nominate as their candidate the outstanding man of their party who can hope to command the support of such Republicans—if any—as those who turned down Grant and Roosevelt.
If it hadn't been for the Washington tradition in 1912 Woodrow Wilson would probably be living today in the obscurity of an ex-governor of New Jersey.

Just think! if Henry Ford gets a martial we can read about Aaron Sapiro's parsnip clubs all over again.

But, Mr. Cameron, what in the name of coldigconomy would be the idea of wasting the railroad fares of 900 delegates and 12,000 reporters on a long trip to San Francisco?
Let us hold the Republican national convention in the East room.

Carter Glass wants the Democratic national convention held here or in Cleveland, and if the party could nominate a Cleveland in Washington, or a Washington in Cleveland it would be a darned good idea.

The Washington Post wanted the Democratic national convention held in the Capital City in 1884 and spilled a lot of valuable ink on the subject, but all it got was the American party convention on August 14, 1888, and that's the only national political convention we ever had, if you can call the "Know-Nothings" of that late day a party. Washington has no Madison Square garden, but we can offer the lion house at the zoo.

We still think that the Democrats' best bet is to hold their convention at Atlanta, Ga., elect Tom Heflin chairman, and nominate Al Smith by acclamation.

Well-known prosecuting attorney is put on trial for taking a drink back in 1924, but by just stating this is made a crime?

The expedition with which the Snyder trial is being conducted gives every reason to hope that the jury will be completed by Christmas.

The feminine lumberjacks down around Luray aren't the only women in this country who are sawing wood today.

The politicians will be relieved to learn from the Agricultural Department statisticians that there are now 649,000 fewer reasons to be scared of the farm bloc.

You don't have to prove that William G. McAdoo's dry speech made a big hit—he admits it.

You've got to admire the D. A. R. for another thing, too—their candidates aren't afraid to admit that they're candidates.

It is understood that yesterday was one of the most discouraging days ever experienced by the distinguished author of the "year without a summer."

The Nicaraguans who fired on the American marines hadn't been informed yet that peace has broken out down there.

One of the most remarkable bandit outrages in the history of Mexico startles the country—not an American was hurt.

It turns out most happily that Capt. George Wilkins, the Arctic flier, was not lost in Alaska. He knew where he was all the time.

The Chinese war is no puzzle to people who can read their own laundry tickets.

Countless jurors in the Snyder case are excused because they don't believe in the law imposing capital punishment. Could those who don't believe in the Volstead act work this, or are there two kinds of laws in this country?

*For cold-blooded brutality the killing of Ray Raymond detracts somewhat even from the Snyder murder.
Here are a couple of movie stars demanding the urgent attention of Mr. Will H. Hays, Custodian of Oblivion.*

Chauncey M. Depew, at 93, says he is not on the water wagon. This terrible example of the Demon Rum might hope to live to a ripe old age if it hadn't been for the drink.

Lack of Funds May Delay Oil Trials Indefinitely

Money Appropriated by Congress for Expenses of Cases Goes Back to Treasury and Can Not Be Touched After June 30.

By ALBERT W. FOX.

New and unexpected complications loom in connection with the oil lease trials being conducted by the government's special counsel, Atlee Pomerene and Owen J. Roberts. Investigation shows all the funds which Congress has appropriated for the expenses of the cases, of which approximately $60,000 remains untouched, go back into the Treasury and can not be used after June 30.

The three appropriations of $100,000 each, made by Congress, have been disbursed by the White House disbursing officer and about $240,000 so far has been expended. But the last appropriation to pay for the expenses of the trials applied specifically to the present fiscal year which ends June 30. Whatever remains unexpended on that date goes back to the Treasury and can not apply to expenses of the next fiscal year beginning July 1.

It was provided as a matter of course in the deficiency bill that any unexpended portion of the fund be made available for the coming fiscal year and there was to be an additional amount. But the deficiency bill went up in smoke along with the mass of legislation which was killed by the Senate filibuster.

There appears to be no way out of the dilemma. Senator Norris, chairman of the Senate Judiciary committee, said he had not looked up the matter, but added that if the fund has lapsed because of failure of the deficiency bill he knew of no remedy unless those prosecuting the case for the government were willing to work for nothing until Congress makes the appropriation. Pomerene and Roberts are willing to work for nothing and rely on getting their stipends later, and Roberts has so stated. But the question of whether their assistants and staffs can continue in operation and whether they can continue to pay witness fees and investigators and jurors, to say nothing of incidental expenses, including traveling expenses, stenographic and printing expenses, appears problematical in the light of Comptroller General McCull's ruling yesterday and in view of the fact that the court, including the District Supreme court, are bowing to the strictest interpretation of the law de-

PASSENGERS LOCKED IN; CARS SET ON FIRE

Victims Are Slain Trying to Escape; Obregon's Daughter Dead or Wounded.

Mexico City, April 20 (By A. P.)— Between 50 and 100 helpless passengers were slaughtered by a great force of revolutionaries or bandits who held up a Guadalajara-Mexico City train last night, after killing the train's entire escort of 50 soldiers. The bandits drenched the coaches with gasoline and kerosene and set them afire, and as the terrified passengers tried frantically to climb out of the windows to escape incineration, they were shot down. The slaughter took place near Limon, state of Jalisco.

Recent outrages, this is declared to have been the worst in Mexican territory. The attack came almost without warning. Suddenly the train was halted while passing through a desolate territory, and the attack, some reports have it, was begun by from 500 to 1,000 armed men.

Lock Doors and Apply Torch.

They made short work of the military guard; then locked the doors of the coaches, applied the torch to the oil-soaked wood, and by the light of the flames that instantly shot up, poured savage fusillades into the bodies of the passengers as they hung half out the windows in an attempt to reach the ground.

First reports reaching Mexico City said that all the passengers had been killed, but President Calles later received information that about half of them had escaped. The presidential office also received reports that three Catholic priests had led the attacking party, characterized by the government as "rebels," numbering a little more than 300.

The railroad authorities were of the belief that the train carried from 100 to 200 passengers, and their estimates were that between 100 and 160 persons were killed or injured.

Former President Obregon's daughter, Coqueta, who is the wife of an army officer, Col. Ponce de Leon, is reported among the dead or injured. No Americans are known to have been on the train.

Guards First Killed.

There is a belief current in Mexico City that the outrage was the work of revolutionaries, as was the case in recent attack on a Laredo-Mexico City train, to discredit the Calles administration as much as possible, both at home and abroad, and focusing foreign attention on the revolutionary conditions in Mexico.

Relief trains and troops have been rushed to the scene of the holdup and the survivors have been taken to Irapuato.

The attack on the train was evidently well planned, for the rebels or bandits tore up the tracks between the stations of Limon and Feliciano. The engine was derailed, but the coaches remained on the tracks. The soldier guards were taken by surprise and greatly outnumbered, and were first to be

Schall Is Exonerated
By State Committee

St. Paul, Minn., April 20 (By A. P.)— A special committee of the Minnesota State senate tonight exonerated United States Senator Thomas P. Schall of charges of violating the corrupt practices act in his 1924 campaign.

Concluding several weeks' investigation, the five members of the committee reported unanimously that charges in the investigating resolution have not been proven.

The finding adds the indorsement of the Senate committee to the decision of the United States Senate, which last winter threw out the contest of former United States Senator Magnus
Johnson, Farmer-Laborite. Senator
Schall is a Republican.

MARINES ARE FIRED ON

SAN FRANCISCO MAKES BID

Mangana, Nicaragua, April 20 (By A. P.)— American bluejackets came into armed conflict this afternoon with a band of 80 men wearing red hat bands and carrying a red flag. After a brief engagement the "reds" retreated, leaving three dead.

There were no casualties among the sailors.

Defying the orders of the United States, prohibiting fighting within 2,000 yards of a railroad, the band attempted to take the village of Posoltega.

The attacking forces were opposed by 24 bluejackets. Posoltega is near Chichigalpa, where fighting was engaged in last night. One liberal was killed in the fighting at Nagarote.

Conservative forces are entraining along the railroad in the hope of clearing out the liberal bands.

American marines in Nicaragua were fired upon three times at various points last night and today. There were no casualties.

Early this morning a train with conservative reinforcements was sent from Managua to Nagarote, the scene of last night's incident. The train carried a marine guard. When it arrived at Nagarote and the conservatives alighted they were met with shots. The marines likewise were fired on and returned fire with machine guns. There were no casualties among the marines. It was

Austin C. Duffield killed his commanding officer, Col. James Stephen Fitzgerald, for the good of the regiment, he pleaded in a statement read in court today. Col. Fitzgerald was shot dead here on April 7.

"I am perfectly sane," read Duffield's statement. "I know what I have done. Since our arrival at Gibraltar, the commanding officer had given up all ideas of soldiering, and it is better that one man should die than a whole regiment be ruined."

Earthquake in Luzon; Much Alarm Is Felt

Manila, April 20 (By A. P.)—An earthquake shook the entire west coast of the Island of Luzon at 1:30 o'clock this morning, doing no damage, but causing great alarm here.

Many householders, fearing collapse of their homes, rushed to the streets.
Father Selga, of the weather bureau, said the quake was of the fifth intensity and that it was not felt on the eastern coast of the island.

Fourth Juror Is Chosen
For Snyder Murder Trial

Three Men Qualify for Duty in Course of Long Session.

Objection to Death Penalty Proves

Principal Obstacle.

New York, April 20 (By A. P.)—Three talemen became jurors in the Snyder trial today, joining Foreman William E. Young, selected yesterday. The first juror of the day, Charles B.
Meisner, was agreed on early in the day.
Harry Arnold and Albert R. Kreamer were approved later in the day.

The increase in the jurymen to try Henry Judd Gray and Mrs. Ruth Snyder, charged with the murder of Albert Kreamer, of College Point, a clerk. He was the 147th taleman to be examined.

Harry Arnold, 29, of Ridgewood, was selected late today as juror No. 3.
Arnold was the 142d taleman questioned since the trial opened Monday.
He is unmarried and gave his occupation as "unemployed."

William B. Meisner, of Springfield, was juror number two. He was the ninety-first taleman to be examined.
Meisner is a landscape gardener, somewhat beyond middle age. He had withstood questioning for half an hour as to his fitness. He was the fourth taleman of the day to be questioned.

MEN AND BUILDINGS ARE TOSSSED ABOUT IN SWIRLING FLOOD

Foaming Whirlpools Strike Clarendon, Ark., as the Water Leaps Levee.

EPIDEMICS BREAK OUT; MORE DROWNINGS OCCUR

Measles, Mumps and Whooping Cough Reported; Military Rule Declared.

Memphis, Tenn., April 20 (By A. P.)—The menace of flood disaster in the lower Mississippi valley grew tonight as Arkansas felt anew the grip of the swollen river. The gulf coast defenses in another State along the river doubled their efforts to save lives and property.

Hurding the levee at Clarendon, Ark., the White river early today surged into a channel 3,000 feet wide and changed its streets into foaming whirlpools where boats, men, animals and swaying houses were tossed about in disorder. Reports of loss of life and tardy residents of the lower sections were coming in from the gulf agencies could explore the stricken town.

Driven by a break in the Arkansas river northwest of Little Rock, the flood charged down in a diminishing curve upon the Levee and moved on to widen the inundated area in North Little Rock, across the stream from the capital.

The Little Rock municipal water plant was also blown late today. Three fire departments were summoned to the reservoirs. Later, a refreshed crew of workmen was recruited and rushed back to occupy the plant in a continuing battle to hold it.

Many Towns Preparing.

Along the 100-mile St. Francis river basin, between New Madrid, Mo., and Helena, Ark., inhabitants of a score of towns and farms were making preparations for the advancing water, which moved southward through a crevasse in the St. John's bayou levee. From New Madrid, an unhappy Venice, the overflow was moving through the valley of the St. Francis. Big lake and a drainage ditch toward the St. Francis proper at Marked Tree.

Preparedness was announced in towns of the St. Francis valley tonight. Local communities were providing shelter and food for those who sought refuge in the live stock and movable goods from the bottom lands. Authorities believed that the danger had been exaggerated and that ample means were available to meet the situation. Several days will elapse, they pointed out, before the waters will add materially to the present stages on the St. Francis.

The levees of the Mississippi were reported holding tonight from Cairo south to Vicksburg. Raising and straightening city authorities announced today. National guardmen are patrolling the streets and no one without business there was allowed on the streets.

Troops at North Little Rock.

Little Rock, Ark., April 20 (By A. P.)—Military control was established in North Little Rock and martial law probably will be asked of Gov. Martin. To-morrow, city authorities announced today. National guardmen are patrolling the streets and no one without business there was allowed on the streets.

Three families were believed tonight to have drowned on the Flynn plantation in Putnam county, 12 miles east of Little Rock. They were warned last night to flee, but were said to have remained in their homes. Neighbors heard screams later in the night as the water crept in.

Six more lives have been added to the toll taken by Arkansas flood waters. Julius Lamb, 3, was drowned when he fell from the front porch of his home near Truman into backwater. E. Rainwater, 24, was drowned near Morrisville. The drowning was known to be six others and nine others missing when six skiffs towed by a motorboat turned over when the motor stalled just as a levee went out within 10 feet of it near here to-night. Another negro was drowned near Eureka, Mo., this morning.

The Arkansas river rose six-tenths of a foot in five hours today to a stage of 32.3 feet at noon. Seven inches of rain had fallen in the twelve hours ended at noon. Traffic over the Missouri-Pacific bridge across the river at North Little Rock, a separate municipality, was suspended when it was found the bridge was a few inches out of line.

Holly Grove and McClellan, near Clarendon, were reported.

An epidemic of measles, mumps and whooping cough has broken out in flood refugee camps at Wynne and Parkin, Ark. There were said to be 250 cases each of measles and whooping cough, and 50 to 75 cases of mumps.

A heavy rain last night fell within a few hours today at Benton, 30 miles south of here. A Missouri-Pacific railroad bridge near there was washed out, street paving was torn up and the Hot Springs Pike washed out for a distance of 200 feet. Water had crept into many stores.

Vanderbilt Girl Denied $500,000 in Insurance

New York, April 20 (By A. P.)—Permission to use $25,000 a year from the income of 3-year-old Gloria Laura, Morgan Vanderbilt, daughter of the late Reginald Vanderbilt, to pay premiums on five endowment insurance policies for the infant totaling $500,000, was denied today by Surrogate James A. Foley. He said there was no statutory authority for such investments.

George W. Wickershaw, general guardian of the child, in making the application, said the insurance policies would secure for Gloria a guaranteed income for life which would be adequate for her maintenance in case of misfortune or the reduction of the loss of her entire estate.

It was estimated that the income to be derived by the child from the death of her mother, Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, or upon the maturity of the policies, would be not less than $25,000 annually and might reach $30,000.

Mr. Wickershaw said the annual income of Gloria's estate at present is greatly in excess of her needs for support and education.

GRAND JURY INDICTS KELLY, FILM ACTOR ON MURDER CHARGE

Dorothy Mackaye, Widow of Slain Comedian, Faints After Testifying.

OTHERS ARE SUMMONED IN FATAL BEATING

Maid, an Eyewitness, Asserts Raymond, Knocked Down, Would Not Hit Back.

Los Angeles, Calif., April 20 (By A. P.)—Paul Kelly, film juvenile, was indicted for first degree murder following the grand jury investigation here today in the death of Ray Raymond, musical comedy actor, who died yesterday after a beating admittedly administered by the screen player.

The indictment was voted within a few minutes after Raymond, widow Dorothy Mackaye, actress, had collapsed in the grand jury room. She crumpled in the witness chair after admitting she had been with Kelly a short time before the fatal beating. The actress was carried outside the jury room. She struck her head on the tile floor of the corridor and was temporarily unconscious.

Physicians had scarcely revived her when the actress learned of the grand jury's action and collapsed outside the jury room. She struck her head on the tile floor of the corridor and was temporarily unconscious.

Had Refused to Testify.

Miss Mackaye reversed her attitude late today and went before the grand jury, called to investigate her husband's death. Miss Mackaye, when questioned by the district attorney this morning, fainted before the flashlights of news photographers and then, momentarily revived, declared she would not testify.

When the grand jury resumed its investigation after the noon recess, Miss Mackaye went before it to testify.

Miss Mackaye told the grand jury that she went to Kelly's apartment, accompanied by Miss Helen Wilkinson, a friend at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon. It was 5 o'clock when Kelly called. Raymond, she said, was in the apartment.

For a few moments, she said, Raymond, who had scarcely revived her when the actress learned of the grand jury's action and collapsed outside the jury room, had struck her head on the tile floor of the corridor and was temporarily unconscious.

Miss Mackaye disclosed that she had visited Kelly in his apartment while he was fighting a losing game for life in the hospital.

Chaplin Makes Trade For a Delay in Suit

Los Angeles, Calif., April 20 (By A. P.)—Charlie Chaplin today traded his personal legal immunity from orders of the California courts for a delay of two weeks in which he can sue Miss Anna Grahams divorce complainant.

The legal trade was negotiated between attorneys representing the comedian and his wife, and, in the form of a stipulation, was approved and signed by Judge Walter Guerin, of the superior court.

For a few moments, she said, Miss Mackaye tried desperately to shield from them her visit to Kelly's apartment.

Raymond died yesterday after being unconscious for more than a day following a beating admittedly administered by Kelly over the head, according to Raymond's wife.

Under the stipulation, Chaplin is given until May 4 to answer his wife's divorce complaint, but places himself under the jurisdiction of the California court.

Italian Minister Injured.

Rome, April 20 (By A. P.)—Pietro Fedele, Italian minister of education, was injured last night in an accident. He was struck in the head by a falling door.

Miss Wilkinson and Max Wagner, film actor and roommate of Kelly, also were said to have told the officers that Miss Mackaye was in the screen juvenile's apartment.

Police detectives said Miss Mackaye had tried to shield from them her visit to Kelly's apartment.

Rome, April 20 (By A. P.)—Pietro Fedele, Italian minister of education, was injured last night in an accident. He was struck in the head by a falling door.

Miss Wilkinson and Max Wagner, film actor and roommate of Kelly, also were said to have told the officers that Miss Mackaye was in the screen juvenile's apartment.

Police detectives said Miss Mackaye had tried to shield from them her visit to Kelly's apartment.

CHIANG TO RESUME
NORTHWARD ATTACK
WITH 300,000 MEN

Moderate Canton Leader Has
No Fear of Opposition
From Hankow.

COMMUNISTS EXECUTED
BY SHANGHAI OFFICIALS

Peking Said to Have Refused Demands of Soviet Over Embassy Raid.

Shanghai, April 20 (By A. P.)—Renewal of the Cantonese campaign against the north is planned by Gen.
Chiang Kai-shek as soon as a cabinet has been formed for the newly-established government by the Cantonese moderates at Nanking, official reports from Nanking say today.

Gen. Chiang, these reports said, does not expect any forceful action from the civil government at Hankow, which the Nanking Cantonese have defied by establishing a government of their own.

It was stated that more than 200,000 troops are immediately available to Gen. Chiang Kai-shek to withstand any onslaught from Hankow, whereas only the meager force is available to the Hankow faction.

The newly-established government at Nanking does not intend to break with Russia and asked the friendship of all countries, but insists upon the abrogation of the unequal treaties.

Fighting at a Standstill.

The campaign against the north, which has been centered along the Yangtze valley for some time with the northerners regaining some of the ground they lost in the past month, has been at a standstill for the past few days, reports from the Yangtze indicating that rains had interrupted the fighting.

Because the Hankow faction of the Cantonese has no real control of the means of communication with the eastern Yangtze district, it has become difficult to obtain authentic information from Hankow as to what plans the government at Nanking has made to cope with the Nanking faction.

It was learned today that two cabinet ministers have definitely been selected by the Nanking government but their names are being withheld.
Reports are current that Dr. C. C. Wu, former minister of foreign affairs in the Canton cabinet, and later Dr. Sun Yat Sen, revolutionary leader, is a strong contender for the foreign affairs portfolio. Dr. Wu is a son of the noted Dr. Wu Ting-Fang, who became Chinese minister at Washington in 1898.

It was declared here that the dismissal of Sun Fei, minister of communication, and T. V. Soong, as minister of finance, by the Nanking government was not significant and was merely a formality, both being acceptable to the Nanking government. Soong is the author of the law of the late Sun Yat Sen and his dismissal has caused some concern among a portion of the Nanking faction.

Six Communists Executed.

Six prisoners, described as communist leaders, who had been members of the Chinese union, were executed today at the national headquarters in the native city of Shanghai.

This brings the total number of agitators executed since the moderates began their drive against the Reds to over 100. Other prisoners are awaiting execution.

A mass meeting held in the native city today advocated aggressive measures against the communists. A resolution was adopted supporting the formed moderate government under Chiang Kai-Shek at Nanking and demanding the expulsion of all communists from the Cantonese movement.

It also called for the arrest of George H. Chen, minister of justice in the Hankow (radical) government Teng Yanta, chief of the political bureau there, and Michael Borodin, the Russian who had been acting as adviser to the Hankow regime.

The communists recommended the dispatch of a telegram to Moscow, capital of soviet Russia, declaring that Borodin, who was appointed as adviser by the late Sun Yat Sen, had used his position to stir up dissension.

Russian Demands Rejected.

Paris, April 20 (By A. P.)—Rejection by the Peking government of the demands of the Russian soviet government in connection with the raid on soviet buildings in the embassy compound at Peking, followed by a dispatch to the Indo-Pacific agency. The raid, on orders of the northern Chinese authorities, was carried out on April 6

Three days after the raid on the soviet embassy compound in Peking, the soviet government ordered all the embassy officials to leave, and in a note delivered to the Chinese charge d'affaires at Moscow, made a series of demands, including immediate evacuation of police from the compound, the release of all those arrested in the raid, and the return of all documents seized, together with all money, personal property, household goods and books given as a present.

What was described as the "most illuminating document" seized in the raid was made public officially Tuesday by headquarters of Chang Tso-Lin, the Manchurian war lord in control of the northern Chinese territory. The document, marked "strictly confidential," purports to be Moscow's instructions to the soviet embassy in Peking relative to the policy toward China. As quoted by headquarters, it urges the soviet to mass military power Europeans, particularly the British, and resort to any means to provoke international intervention in China, even to the extent of looting and murdering foreigners.

An official communiqué setting forth the contents says the document is written in Russian and had been partly burned.

649,000 Is Decrease
In Farm Population

(By the Associated Press)

A decrease of 649,000 persons in the farm population of the United States during the last year, the largest decrease in any year since 1900, was announced yesterday by the Department of Agriculture. The department estimated that 27,892,000 persons were living on farms on January 1, 1927, as compared with 28,541,000 on January 1, 1926. The Federal agricultural census of that year.

The movement of population from farms to cities was estimated at 2,155, 000 persons for last year, while 1,135,
000 moved to the cities, making a net movement of 1,020,000 persons away from farms. Births on farms during the year were estimated at 658,000 and deaths at 287,000, leaving a natural increase of 371,000 which reduced the loss due to the cityward movement to 649,000.

That the simple structure of American government as founded by the builders of America has had added to it a "mass of paternalistic lean-to's," was the contention of Marie Thorpe,

THE ECONOMIC CONFERENCE.

President Coolidge and his advisers have selected representatives to attend the international economic conference at Geneva next month. The members of the American delegation are individuals who have had great experience in governmental matters, especially financial affairs, and the experts selected doubtless have special knowledge as to the workings of existing laws and regulations governing international trade and commerce.

The people of the United States may wonder how it happens that this country is sending a delegation to an international economic conference when it is our policy to stand aloof from participation in foreign politics and even from economic discussions colored with international politics.

There have been other international economic conferences in Europe to discuss European economics; but this is the first to which the United States has sent delegates openly and frankly, not as observers, but as participants. None of these previous conferences in Europe has succeeded in contributing much to the solution of European economics. Perhaps it is thought that the United States might help Europe in solving its problems.

To the suggestion that any active participation in European economics by a delegation from the United States is perilous, it is well said that this delegation can not commit the United States to any policy or bind this government or Congress to any program.

The problems to be discussed at the Geneva conference include many of vital importance to the United States. If the solution of economic problems as outlined and suggested in the Versailles treaty is followed, it is conceivable that the interests of the United States might suffer not a little. However, it is presumed that the delegation from this country will not have power to enter into any engagements in that direction.

The representatives of the United States at the Geneva conference should not leave the impression in Europe that the present economic policies of the United States as touching other countries may be altered to suit Europe. The United States must be independent economically as well as industrially and politically. This is not isolation. It is safety.

A GREAT HORSEMAN.

During the present month there died in England, in comparative obscurity, an American, whose name a few years ago was on the tongue of thousands of his fellow citizens. His life was short, but it was crowded such a variety of experiences and adventures in many lands as falls to the lot of but few. A great horseman, George Archibald, was born at Oakland, Calif., in 1890 and, before he was induced to go to Germany by Mr. Oppenheimer, he had ridden the winner of nearly every big race in the United States. In Germany he became the champion jockey, and followed his profession in that country until shortly before the war, when he came back to the United States for a brief visit. Sailing then for Rotterdam, he was advised at that port by the American Ambassador to Germany that he could go on to Berlin, which he did, and in Berlin he remained until the United States entered the war. Then he escaped across the Austrian frontier in a car provided for him by Prince Hohenlohe, for whom he rode in Austria. A period of internment followed, but the American was ultimately allowed to leave for Switzerland.

Undaunted by these exciting experiences, and with the love of the thoroughbred and of the track strong within him, Archibald next made his way to Spain and at San Sebastian he won all the important races. In 1922 he went to England as first jockey to one of the leading Newmarket stables, and almost immediately gave a taste of his quality by winning the City and Suburban handicap on Taragon and the Two Thousand Guineas on St. Louis, and by riding an extremely remarkable two-year-old, Town Guard, to six victories. He was confident of winning the Epsom derby in 1923 on the same horse, but in that race Town Guard, although starting favorite, gave a poor display, which has never since been explained. Altogether, during his five years in England he rode 180 winners. His best season there was in 1924, when he was successful on 52 occasions, including two victories on King George's horses, Runnymede and London Boy. In the course of his whole career it is computed that he rode no fewer than 1,000 winners.

Archibald practically died in the saddle. On the first day of the Craven meeting at Newmarket he rode in the second race and immediately thereafter complained of severe pains in the stomach. Despite his suffering, he rode in the next four races, and was then removed to his home, where he died suddenly.

The English papers have nothing but praise for Archibald. They speak in high terms of his pleasant manner and quiet disposition, and recognize in him one who possessed all the qualities of a true horseman.

THE LEGATION AT OTTAWA.

The decision of the Canadian government to acquire a legation building in Washington at a cost of $500,000 is most gratifying to Americans. They look upon this action as more than formal recognition of the importance of Canada's diplomatic relations with the United States. It is looked upon as a testimonial of Canada's faith in a future which promises to perpetuate the close friendship of neighbors who have lived as equals in peace and concord for more than a century.

The United States should not be slow in following Canada's example. There should be erected at Ottawa an imposing and commodious structure, adequate to the needs of the American legation for the next half century or longer. Possibly the allotments for legations in foreign countries have been made for this year, but the program should be amended as soon as possible to include a building at Ottawa. No mistake should be made by providing a building merely capable of meeting present needs. Canada is rapidly growing, and today's needs are not a criterion of tomorrow's necessities.

The handsome legation established by the Canadian government in Washington is a wise investment in more ways than one. It is a memorial, as well as a building; a reminder of the fact that a nation of enormous resources has risen in the north. Americans and foreigners viewing this legation can not fail to be impressed by Canada's present prestige and her confidence in her great destiny. Similarly, an American legation of the same character at Ottawa would serve as a memorial of national friendship and as evidence that the men of today have a vision piercing into tomorrow.

DRIVING INTO TRAINS.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad notes a public response to its constant appeals for "safety first." While highway crossing accidents over the entire country took a toll of nearly 2,500 lives in 1926, an increase of 300 over the 1925 figures, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul record decreased 7 per cent. This is good news, for if one railroad can make progress there is no reason why others can not follow suit. It may be that the break has come, and that henceforth the grade accident statistics for the entire country will decline.

In its report the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul calls attention to the fact that no fewer than 153 automobiles crashed into the sides of its trains during the year. This is carelessness of the worst sort. A train is dangerous, even when not in motion. It is up to the motorist to avoid the train, and the 153 drivers who guided their vehicles deliberately against the cars deserve no pity.

DARING MARK SULLIVAN.

Mark Sullivan, able political observer and reporter, has chosen to ignore the President's official spokesman. "Mr. Coolidge quieted today the storm of discussion aroused by his unintentional allusion to Herbert Hoover last week," reports Mr. Sullivan. Then follow such phrases as "the President explained" and "the President added."

Something is going to happen. Perhaps even now. United States marshal is hunting the indiscreet correspondent, armed with papers to place him in the calaboose. Senator Jim Reed may be hurrying back to Washington, summoned for the purpose of extending still further the activities of his defunct slush fund committee. Thousands are wondering what could have prompted Mr. Sullivan, as stanch a Republican as ever breathed, to thus embarrass the President. The repercussion is bound to be wide.

One awaits anxiously reports from the States as to the effect of this dangerous innovation in news writing. The "spokesman" has been slighted. Is Wall street trembling? Will the railroads disintegrate? Will the rivers run dry? Will flood and drought, famine, pestilence and the summerless summer follow? What is going to happen?

VETERANS' BUREAU SUPPLIES

The District commissioners, acting upon the advice of the bureau of efficiency, have requested the veterans' bureau to turn over to the District, without cost save as to freight and hauling, several thousand dollars' worth of supplies and material now in storage at Perryville, Md. The material is no longer of use to the bureau and has been listed as surplus.

The list looks like the inventory of a large department store. It includes blankets, sheets, towels, pillowcases, dental equipment and hospital supplies, automobile accessories, cooking utensils, cutlery, coats, sponges and invalid chairs. In all there are approximately 1,000 items, all of which can be put to good use by various branches of the District government.

The workhouse, the reformatory, the national training schools and the public welfare department will be the beneficiaries if the transfer can be arranged. Since the property is useless to the organization now holding title the general economy program requires that it be utilized elsewhere. It is to be hoped that the reply to the request of the commissioners will be favorable.

"SEWARD'S FOLLY."

If the Russian government could have sold $5,000,000 worth of pulp timber as it stood in the forests of southeastern Alaska in 1867, when Secretary Seward purchased the entire Territory for the insignificant sum of $7,200,000, his majesty, the Czar of all the Russias, would not have signed the document that transferred Alaska to the United States, and Mr. Seward would not have been lampooned as a wastrel for throwing away the money of the people.

The forestry division of the Department of Agriculture has just signed a contract for the sale of $350,000 cords of hemlock and spruce timber to a San Francisco firm at an average of 50 cents a cord. Next week bids will be received for a like amount, and the price is not likely to be less than that to be received from the transaction that was closed on Tuesday. That means that there will be paid directly into the Treasury from the sale of a comparatively small part of the timber which lines the shores of Alaska something like $8,700,000, or $1,500,000 more than the cost of the Territory.

Until the discoveries of the gold in the creeks in the valley of the Yukon the chief source of income from Alaska was the fur seal industry of the Pribilof Islands. In the 60 years since the purchase of the Territory the fur seal industry has produced $62,000,000. But large as that sum looms as a return upon the investment of $7,200,000, it is insignificant indeed compared with the value of the Alaska fisheries, which have returned a total of $683,000,000 to those who have been engaged therin since 1867.

In 1926 there were 132 salmon canneries in operation in Alaska and they gave employment to 28,000 people, the value of the pack that year being placed at $46,000,000 by the Bureau of Fisheries.

To speak of Alaska naturally leads to the discussion of the gold production of that region, and many persons are inclined to the belief that the value of the gold produced is greater than the returns from any other industry in the Territory. But that impression is proved erroneous, for the Bureau of the Mint reports that since the discovery of the precious metal there the output has amounted to 17,445,238 ounces, with a mint value of $360,625,000. This, however, is 50 times as much as Seward paid for his "folly."

DEDUCTION AND DEAD LETTERS.

The Postoffice Department has been trying for years to educate the users of the mails up to the point where they will take pains to write legibly, address carefully and place names of streets and numbers of houses on their communications, but without appreciably reducing the number of pieces of mail matter that find their way to the dead-letter office.

The department recognizes that much of this vast tonnage might be delivered if more care were exercised on the part of postmasters and their employees. To bring about this desirable outcome the Acting First Assistant Postmaster General has ordered postmasters to select an experienced city distributor in each office to whom shall be referred all undeliverable mail.

It is realized at last that some of these old-timers have knowledge of names and locations of business houses, which knowledge, if made available, might serve to materially reduce the number of "dead" packages.

Also such men are certain to have enough discretion and common sense to prevent the return to the sender of a letter addressed to a well-known business man in "Berwyn," Md., which was intended for that business man in "Berwyn," as was done a short time ago. The civil service clerk reported "no such office in State named" because he had probably passed 100 per cent in spelling.

They don't use as much discretion in deciphering blind addresses in the dead-letter office as they did in the days when John Wanamaker was Postmaster General. That official took great delight in exhibiting the result of the use of brains on the part of Mrs. Collins, then holding a clerkship in the D. L. O.

The exhibit in question was an envelope which had contained a letter from England addressed to "Horsewigger, Horsewigger county, America." Mrs. Collins promptly forwarded the missive to Oswego, Oswego county, N. Y., with a request that the person receiving it send the envelope back. It reached its proper destination, and Mrs. Collins explained her method: "In the first place the letter bore an English postage stamp; ergo, the natural assumption that the h's were superfluous. With 'h' eliminated from the name of the town and the county we had, phonetically spelled, the only town in the United States sounding like Orswigger in a county of like sound, and of course that meant Oswego, the thriving city in northern New York."

But latter-day clerks do not use their imagination or their faculties for deduction.

THE STEEL STOCK "MELON."

Decision of the stockholders of the United States Steel Corporation to add to its common stock by distributing a 40 per cent increase, amounting to $250,000,000, in the shape of stock dividends, has afforded the radicals and critics of modern business methods another opportunity to mislead the unthinking.

Not many years ago, when the United States Steel Corporation was organized, it was asserted that the common stock was simply water injected into the corporation. It was justified and defended by the corporation at the time on the ground that the true value of the corporation did not lie in its tangible assets but in its possibilities, its earning power in the future. This contention has been amply fulfilled.

The United States Steel Corporation is now the largest private corporation in the United States, perhaps the world. This corporation does a business larger than any other corporation, and is owned by thousands of stockholders, a veritable example of sound economic community of interest.

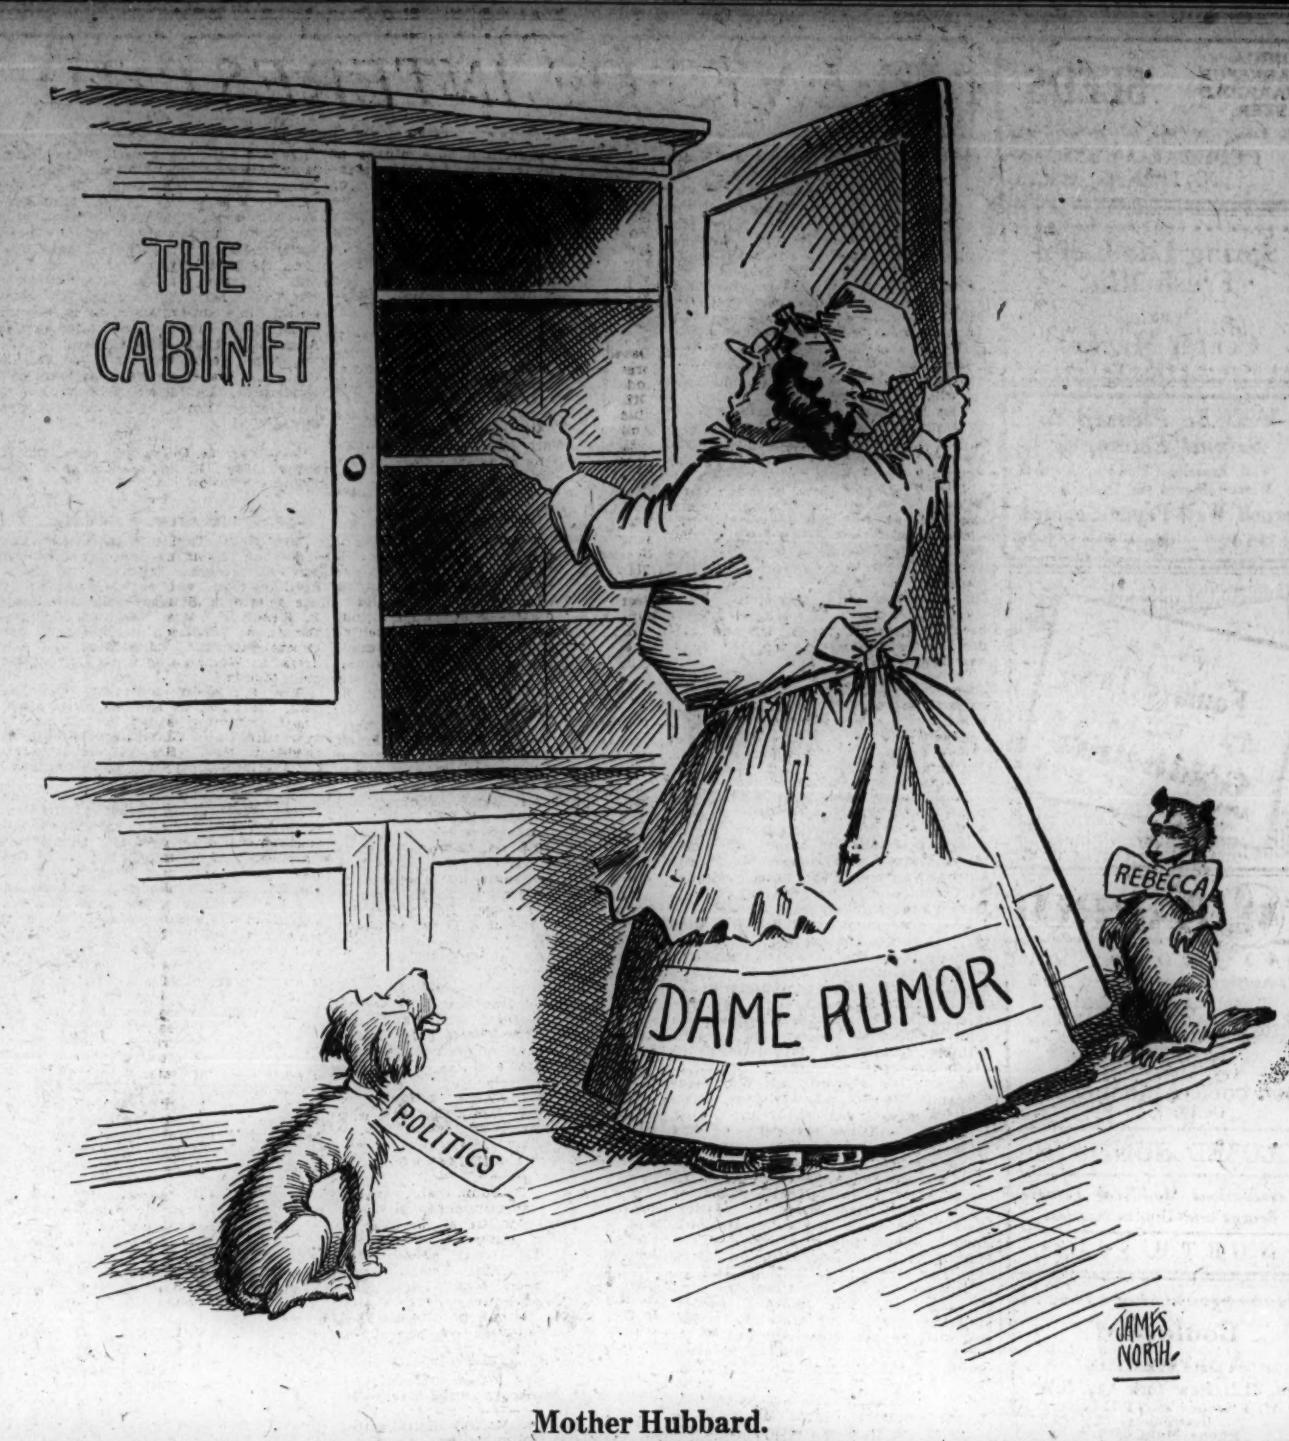

This action of the corporation calls public attention to the essential fact that the real value of any industrial plant, as represented in its stock, is not the buildings and machinery, but the managing brains, the skill and foresight of its managing heads and the future earning possibilities, which can be realized only by means of rare genius in management.

It is estimated that the capital invested in the industrial establishments of the United States is approximately $50,000,000,000. If the earning power of these corporations in ten years can be doubled, the stock may be doubled in market value without any large increase in the capital invested or actual additions to the physical plant.

This stock dividend by the Steel Corporation is evidence of increase in earning power. It is a complete reply to those who declared that the common stock was nothing but water. This issue did not add to the relative shares of each stockholder, therefore was not income. It was a distribution of earnings by means of additions to capital.

Under the decision of the Supreme Court this stock dividend can not be taxed as income. Whether Congress will be able to reach such a case and apply the income tax thereto, remains to be seen.

The main lesson to be absorbed is that the value of the common stock of any industrial corporation depends upon its present and future earning power, not its tangible assets. Such earnings become capital and give life and value to common stock.

WILKINS REAPPEARS IN ALASKA; MISSING 3 WEEKS ON FLIGHT

Arctic Flier Makes Way Back to Beechey Point After Continent Search.

WAS DOWN ON THE ICE
125 MILES FROM LAND

Mishap Ended His Second Trip Into the "Blind Spot" of Northern Ocean.

New York, April 20 (By A. P.)—The North American Newspaper Alliance was informed today that Capt. George Wilkins, Arctic flier who had been missing since March 29, when he hopped off from Point Barrow, Alaska, for the unexplored regions to the north, has made a safe return to Beechey Point, Seattle, Wash. April 20 (By A. P.)—Capt. George H. Wilkins, who was reported safe today at Beechey Point, Alaska, about 150 miles southeast of Point Barrow, had not been heard from since March 30, when he sent a brief wireless message that he was on the ice, 125 miles from Point Barrow.

With Carl B. Eielson as his pilot, Wilkins set out March 29 in a Stinson plane for an exploration flight over the unexplored Arctic ocean north of Alaska. The plane had sufficient fuel for a fourteen-hour flight and he had planned to fly out 600 miles from his Point Barrow base in search of the mythical Arctic continent.

Relief Plane Found No Trace.

A relief plane, manned by Algren Graham, of Detroit, and an Eskimo guide, made several flights from Point Barrow in search of Wilkins and Eielson, but found no trace of the explorers or their plane.

Graham returned last week to Fairbanks for supplies and planned to fly back to Point Barrow to continue rescue attempts, although Wilkins had left specific instructions that no rescue expeditions should be organized if he did not return within three days.

Wilkins had enough dried food for about two weeks on their plane, and expected to "live off the country" by shooting game if they should not reach civilization by the time their supplies were exhausted.

This was Wilkins' second venture into the Arctic blind spot. Last year, after a series of accidents and misfortunes, Wilkins and Eielson flew from Fairbanks to Point Barrow and out 150 miles over the ice. Shortage of fuel and the coming of spring fog prevented further exploration and Wilkins was obliged to return.

Snow Motors Were Failure.

The fuel shortage was caused by the failure of a snow motor to supply train to Point Barrow. The snow motors proved impractical and the supply train was imperiled with exhaustion and starvation before the attempt was given up.

Wilkins sent large supplies of fuel to Point Barrow by boat last fall and planned to freight the remaining supplies by air to Point Barrow this spring. One of his heavily loaded planes failed to raise from the Fairbanks aviation field and Wilkins entered Joe Crosson's plane and started to fly to Point Barrow with A. M. Smith, Detroit News representative, with the party. Crosson started off with only two hours' notice, refueled at Wiseman, about half way, and reached Point Barrow shortly after Wilkins and his two planes arrived.

When word of Wilkins and Eielson's latest mishap after their hop off from Point Barrow was received, fears were felt by Alaskans for the safety. It was pointed out that the spring fog was approaching that extensive water leads existed off the Arctic coast of Alaska and that walking would be perilous.

If available reports of Capt. George H. Wilkins' Arctic flight are correct, it must be considered a remarkable showing and proof that the airplane is well adapted to travel to stay in the Arctic region. Evelyn Briggs Baldwin, explorer and commander of the Baldwin-Ziegler polar expedition in 1901, declared last night.

"I understand Wilkins made three landings on ice floes and flew one section of his flight over land. If these reports are true this was a remarkable showing. I am not surprised, however, that no land was sighted. I have conjectured for years to naval authorities that there is no large body of land in the Arctic."

FLEAS

A man once bit by fleas put out the light, and, chuckling, cried, "Now you can't see to bite." He lived to learn the folly of his thought and was kept quite busy while his teachers taught. Another man, when springtime rolled around and the sunshine let him shut his furnace down, said, "I'll let my bin stay empty till next fall, in fact, I may not fill it up at all." And he, too, learned the folly of his thought and wished that in the spring his coal he'd bought. For the loss incurred by his delay, when in the fall much more per ton he had to pay.

OTHER OFFICERS CHOSEN

The Catholic committee on international peace, formed at the eucharistic conference in Chicago, resolved itself into a permanent organization at its meeting in Rauscher's yesterday afternoon. Henceforth the organization shall be known as the Catholic Association for International Peace.

At the meeting yesterday a constitution was adopted and the following officers elected:

Honorary president, the Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Shahan, rector of Catholic university; president, Martin T. Manion, of New York; vice presidents, the Rev. Moorhouse C. X. Miller, S. of New York; Frederick E. Kinsella, of St. Louis; Dr. Calahan, of Louisville; Dr. Herbert F. Wright, of Washington; William Franklin Sands, of this city; the Rev. Charles Miltner, of Notre Dame, Ind.; the Rev. Dr. John A. Ryan, of Catholic University, and Dr. Daniel Gamble of York, Pa.; secretary, E. Francis Riggs, of this city. The office of treasurer was created but nobody was elected to fill it.

At the morning session, Dr. Charles G. Wright, of Bryn Mawr, outlined the various steps that have been taken in all parts of the world to insure international peace. He explained that he was simply giving the history of the peace movement, and was making no suggestions or recommendations.

SHORTAGE MAY DELAY OIL TRIAL PROGRESS

Despite embarrassment through shortage of funds. In other words, there is to be no juggling of funds to meet emergencies if such methods do not absolutely square with the law, it is said.

The law forbids any officer of the United States from incurring an obligation beyond the amount appropriated for, but Pomerene and Roberts will contend that they are not officers of the United States. But the law also forbids the government to accept service gratis and all expenses rendered by special counsel and their assistants after June 30 will be gratis, and no payment of any kind made by them after June 30, can be charged up to the special fund appropriated to pay them.

It will not be for the trial that transfers or exchanges of funds are being strictly forbidden; those admittedly would be some means whereby some funds in the Department of Justice or elsewhere might be available, and it may be that some means will yet be found. But no one is able to point out how it can be done.

The next scheduled move in the oil cases is the trial of former Secretary of the Interior, Robert B. Fall, and Harry F. Sinclair, New York oil magnate, on the conspiracy indictment. This is scheduled to begin May 23, and, according to forecasts from both sides, should be concluded in about a month.

Expenses for this trial will be paid by the White House disbursing officer, paying all the bills up to and including June 30. But on the following day the government's special fund ceases to exist, and whatever may be left of the amount is no longer available.

It will be possible for the government's special counsel to make a last-minute apportionment of the amount remaining in the White House disbursing officer's account on June 30, and then draw their own financial expenses or reimburse themselves and their assistants while at the same time reducing the amount of money which will pass out of their control. But the question which arises is as to whether that can take place if the amount specifically appropriated for the last fiscal year and legally apply it to the succeeding year.

Meanwhile Justice William Hitz has to rule on the defense motion by his counsel for E. L. Doheny and Fall in the bribery indictments. If the demurmer should be overruled there will be no possibility of bringing the case to trial until Congress meets in December and makes the required appropriation. The Fall prosecution reluctantly have permitted him to come to Washington in late April or May despite his severe attack of pneumonia complicated by heart trouble. The climate here during the late spring, summer and early fall is not regarded as being particularly conducive to the condition of health. But for Fall to come north in the winter months would not be sanctioned by any physician, it is said, as his health could not stand it. It will be next winter before there may be any new appropriation and it may therefore be necessary for both Fall and Doheny to stand trial unless the trial is over by June 30. This would mean another delay of about an even year in prosecuting the oil cases.

Robert E. and George P. Hoover argued the question of future trials before Justice Hitz in connection with the government's recent appeal for a postponement of the Fall-Sinclair conspiracy case. Hoover declared the funds available to the government's special counsel no longer would be at their disposal after June 30.

Flat statements yesterday that the remaining part of the special fund would be turned back to the Treasury and no longer disbursed by the White House disbursing officer, were denied by the district controller. Coincident with this, Commissioner McCarran's decision daily refusing to permit a juggling of funds to pay police court jurors until July 1. In the District Supreme court there remain about $100,000 for the expenses of witnesses and jurors' caligraphic cases. Shortage of funds has obstructed trial by jury in two circuit courts. In other words, the courts are abiding by the law.

All vouchers for expenditures up to $60,000 signed by Pomerene or Roberts will be honored up to and including June 30, it was stated, but not after that.

McCarthy Denies Money To Conduct Police Court

Commissioner General John R. McCarthy yesterday ruled that the police court will have to postpone the date of its pending jury trial until after July 1. In so doing he mildly chided the District authorities for laying the case before him.

For compensation of jurors were denied the police court, the deficiency bill failed to pass Congress. The judges asked the commissioners if they could not spend the money anyway, but trust to luck that Congress would appropriate it in a new deficiency bill next winter. The commissioners denied the request.

Then Judge Gus A. Schuldt wrote a letter to McCarthy asking if 1928 appropriations could be appropriated for 1927 jurors' pay, and repeating the request that the commissioners be permitted to create a further deficiency.

McCarthy ruled that the 1928 appropiations could not be used and then said, as to the creating of a new deficiency, that there was nothing in the suggestion for him to decide.

"Responsibilities and duties of administrative officers may not be shifted to his office," McCarthy said.

Salvation Army Camp Will Be Improved

The advisory board of the Salvation Army, meeting in the Evangeline residence, 1338 L street northwest yesterday, approved plans for the expenditure of $10,000 to improve the army's fresh air camp, Happyland, at Patuxent, Md. Rudolph Jones, chairman of the board, and several members will visit the camp next week to determine the location of three buildings to be erected. Staff Capt. Ernest R. Holt, divisional commander of the army, will conduct the party.

ARLINGTON OFFICIAL DRANK IN PUBLIC, WITNESSES SAY

sult of the conference appointed Allen F. Garner, of Falls Church, to prosecute the charges.

When court resumed, Mr. Garner's first move was for a postponement of the trial, declaring he was unfamiliar with the case and should be given time to study it. Judge Spratley told him he could have an hour, and recessed court.

Gloth Greets Visitors.

While Mr. Garner was going over the evidence Mr. Gloth was making a prompt reception in the courtroom with political leaders of the county and the State gathered about him. Judge Spratley chatted brightly with them and other visitors in the courtroom, contrasting the judicial austerity with which he conducted the trial in spite of a lightning boutonniere in the lapel of his gray spring coat.

A jury of five men was selected with our difficulty, and John S. Barbour, chief of the attorneys defending Mr. Gloth, waived all question of the statute of limitations, declaring that he intended to show the charges were a part of a political plot against his client.

Mrs. Florence E. Cannon, attractively attired in black silk dress and black silk stockings, was the principal witness for the prosecution, but Mr. Barbour attacked her testimony and forced her to admit that she had been to the bar at least one drink of liquor on various occasions on which she charged Mr. Gloth with having been under the influence of liquor. The questions and her admission created something of a stir in the crowded courtroom. Mr. Barbour developed the admission, too, that when Mr. Gloth had sought her out to get the names of persons conducting a "policy" game in the county with the announced purpose of prosecuting them, Mrs. Cannon had refused to give him the names. Mrs. Cannon said she had been a lobbyist, but had given it up.

Mrs. Cannon insisted she was well able to judge of the condition of Mr. Gloth at the times complained of, in spite of the fact that she had had a drink herself on those occasions. Once she said, she took a drink because she had become chilled while sitting in an automobile near the polls in Arlington at the election in November. She admitted that she was opposed to Mr. Gloth and probably was eager to find him for reelection. She had been in concert with Hugh Reid, a prospective candidate for county office who has been active in county politics, Mrs. Cannon agreed.

It was about 10 o'clock, 25 years old, that Mr. Barbour leveled his heaviest bombardment of cross-examination, which she met smilingly and graciously. She made a picture in the witness chair and seemed not to be unhooded with her knowledge of the facts. She admitted that she had "eaten craps" in the course of a gathering at which she had taken a drink. But that, she said, had nothing to do with the fact that Mr. Gloth was under the influence of intoxicating liquors at the times and places she said he was.

Mrs. Cannon occupied the center of attention largely because she was depended on by Mr. Baille as the star witness, through whose testimony he was to sustain his charges against the accused attorney. The star, stocky, gray-haired, an old school orator, and with something of the inquisitiveness of the typical country editor still about him, Mr. Baille produced other witnesses to sustain his claim. One of the charges was that Mr. Gloth had a ticsy, or worse, at the races at Upper Marlboro, but under cross-examination it was disclosed that the races were not being run on the date specified. Mr. Baille admitted to change the date by a week, but Judge Spratley noted that one of the five charges.

E. F. Batcheller, whom Mr. Gloth accused of breaking up his home and of following him about, was one of the witnesses for the prosecution, testifying that the Commonwealth's attorney had threatened to kill him last Halloween night.

Mr. Batcheller declared that Mr. Gloth had come to his home in Arlington while under the influence of liquor and that he had been threatening and insulting his wife, who witnessed the scene from the porch, declaring she was crazy.

Gloth demanded that he come down the stairs, Mr. Batcheller said, and he "shook his finger in my face and the obscene and filthy terms threatened to kill me," Mr. Batcheller testified. "He struck at me several times. I said I would get witness that he continued to talk like that. He said he didn't want any witness."

Elmer Cook, of Clarendon; Joseph Burt, of Clarendon; Charles R. Taylor of Clarendon, were prosecution witnesses.

Leonard King, of Rosslyn; Gardner L. Booth, of Alexandria; former Judge Robinson Monroe, of Alexandria; Randall Caton, of Alexandria; William Woods, of Alexandria; Charles T. Jesse, of Fort Myer Heights, a member of the house of Representatives; State Senator R. E. Bales and Sheriff Howard B. Fields were among the witnesses for the defense which Mr. Gloth presented against the charges. Mr. Jesse admitted that he had drunk with Gloth while on the trip to the mountains, but denied it, but he insisted that Mr. Gloth was not intoxicated. The trial will be resumed at 10:30 o'clock this morning.

AVOID UGLY PIMPLES

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin takes the tablets to cleanse it, you have taken the tablets a few nights. Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; due to sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a dull, listless "no good" feeling; constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or plump-faced.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients affected with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c, 20c, 60c—Adv.

The Housekeeper

Nancy Carey

YES, Mrs. Howard, it is possible for man to live exclusively on the meat or animals, that is, animal protein, but should we adopt this good health for extended periods of time, as our body does require a combination of food rather than meat alone of any one food. We can not eat too many vegetables. They supply so much, and they supply also minerals that are necessary to our well being. We speak of vitamins. These are to be found in vegetables. And as you have asked this question, Mrs. Howard, and as it is the spring of the year, let us think again of the cookery of vegetables before we turn to our menu today.

Many of the vegetables that we cook do not require water for the cooking process. This is the case with leeks, onions, carrots, turnips, and radishes, and far less effort if cooked in the water that comes from the vegetable itself as it cooks. We should, for instance, not attempt to cook spinach in water other than the water that clings to the leaves after it is washed and drained for the last time. This water will seep down into the bottom of the closed kettle in which the spinach is cooked, and other water, or juice, if you like, will seep out of the leaves and the whole will be very thin and cut in narrow strips.

These must be washed as they bake, for they must not be too dark nor too light in color. While not a fancy bit of cookery they are a delicious bit when properly put out and watching is a small price to pay for a perfect result.

This process is known as waterless cookery and a firm manufacturing cooking utensils has put out a special set of cooking dishes for the top of the stove in which the vegetables may be cooked in this manner. Much as I dislike to disagree with any one, I feel obliged to say that these dishes—or any particular dishes—are not necessary to the success of waterless cookery. The method is simple and easy. It is true that fire is fire, and just so hot, depending upon the amount applied. If we turn the flame up to an absurd degree the thick pot will protect the vegetable for a certain time.

But we have wasted our fuel for the vegetable will cook much faster and faster—far as we may to speed it up with additional fuel and hotter and hotter flame. To successfully cook without water in the equipment that is already on our shelves it is necessary only that one of the following methods be used: the fire just high enough to keep it simmering and cook it the usual length of time. There will be no burning, and no scorching taste to the vegetable, provided our fire is low. I am quite sure that, for we have made use of the excellent method of waterless cookery here at the studio for the period of its existence and we have yet to receive here a special utensil for the purpose.

More than spinach may be cooked without water. Carrots should never cook in anything but a bit of butter and a flavoring of pepper and salt; beans may be cooked with just the moisture that clings to them when they are washed and drained in a colander.

Beets require a small amount of water, but should be thoroughly washed and then the water in which they are used may be allowed to boil away except for the last bit which may be left with the beet in a saucepan. Some of our vegetables do require water. In my opinion these are asparagus, cauliflower, rhubarb, turnips, and so on. Squash should never have water added to it, for it is largely water.

CREAMED FINNAN HADDIE.

To the cream sauce that we have had from time to time add smoked finnan haddie which has been steamed in a covered dish in a very small amount of water. It will require about twenty minutes for this steaming; and the cream sauce will be very low as the cooking process continues largely of a thorough steaming rather than even a simmering. When cooked remove to a flat dish and place the meat, free from the bones, on the center of the sauce, season well to taste with salt and pepper and serve either on toast or crisp crackers. Or this may be used in the manner I have just suggested for creamed chipped beef.

CABBAGE, ORANGE AND APPLE SALAD.

This may sound a bit strange, but it is good. Chop or run the cabbage through a fine knife of the grinder and add to it a little less than equal amounts of orange and apple, also cut to very small pieces. The orange must have had all of the white fiber removed to make it good. Mix with mayonnaise until the whole is of a due consistency. Then serve on crisp lettuce leaves. Don't worry about garnish with paprika. Nuts may be added to this salad if they are desired. The cabbage makes a splendid base and is hardly recognizable.

HOT MUFFINS.

Mix and sift 2 cups of flour with 4 teaspoons baking powder, half teaspoon salt and 2 tablespoons of sugar; then add gradually 1 cup of milk, 1 egg, well beaten, and 2 tablespoons melted butter. Bake in buttered gem pans for 20 minutes, remembering that if iron pans are used they must be first

STUDENTS OF BANKING AWARDED CERTIFICATES

Employees Praised by Educator at Meeting Marking End of Course.

STOCKS CONTINUE ACTIVE

By F. W. PATTERSON.

A stirring tribute was made by Dean Stephen I. Miller, national educational director of the American Institute of Banking, to the 100 students of the banking chapter who were presented with certificates for completion of work in the educational course, at the annual spring meeting of the chapter, last night in the Willard hotel.

Urging upon the students, all of whom are employed in the financial institutions of Washington and environs, to adopt a system of continuity in education, Dean Miller pointed to the fact that a remarkable spread of adult education has taken place in recent years, and he urged them to the hopeful signs of the future.

T. Hutton Leitch, president of Washington chapter, presided. Howard Moran, president of the District Bankers association, introduced by the presiding officer and his wife, and the officers of the local chapter extended greetings from his association and expressed himself as proud of the strides made by the junior organization in offering facilities to bank employees for increasing their knowledge of the theory of banking.

President Moran presented certificates, members of the class in banking fundamentals who had completed this study.

The class in banking fundamentals, which was the largest in the chapter, was the largest of the certificates given to them on completion last night. Eliot H. Thompson is the instructor in this subject.

Heading the group of students who successfully completed the course in investments, which was taught by Y. E. Booker, of Y. E. Booker & Co. investment, engineering, Dr. W. E. Miller, expert, chemist, author and banker. Graduating in the same class were two past presidents of Washington chapter, Harold W. Burnside and R. Jesse Chaney.

The standard certificates and those in the investment course were presented by President Leitch.

W. J. Dunn, president of Cleveland chapter, American Institute of Banking, was a guest of the local chapter, and in bringing a message from the Ohio organization, complimented the local chapter upon its remarkable work and the manner in which it was making itself felt throughout the country. The Cleveland chapter is one of the largest in the country with a total membership of 1,900.

Following the meeting and presentation of certificates there was dancing until midnight.

Last spring, he won the Indian Spring and Chevy Chase events and will endeavor to repeat that performance when he again enters this year.

In addition, he is to be an entrant in the Chevy Chase, the Golf and Country club and the Columbia club tournaments and will, of course, defend his title as champion of the Middle Atlantic Golf association in the competition.

He will be in the "big four" days in such an array of the tourneys in the Va. country club. He also expects to compete in the national amateur championship tournament at Minneapolis next August.

HEIGHT RESTRICTION ON BUILDINGS RAISED BY ZONING OFFICIALS

Amendment Made After Public Hearing Permits Pyramid Structure Design.

WALTER REED HALTS, COMMERCIAL PROJECT

Stores Would Bring Objectionable Characters Near Hospital, Letter Says.

Higher office buildings and hotels are in store for Washington as a result of a ruling by the zoning commission yesterday, following a public hearing. The commission adopted the following amendment to the zoning code:

"In the four-story height district, buildings may be erected to a height not exceeding 130 feet or twelve stories provided such buildings face or abut a street or streets not less than 110 feet wide between building lines and provided, further, that above the 110-foot line all outside walls are set back 6 inches for each foot of height above this level."

This permits the style of tall buildings now in vogue in New York, of pyra-midal design, smaller floor areas as necessary for the commission to rule on applications in behalf of the estate of Mr. John R. McLean for permission to erect exactly the kind of structure described in the amendment on the block bounded by H Street, northeast, 14th and Vermont avenue northwest, and by the theater building for permission to add stories. These developments may now be made under the code as amended.

Rezoning Is Prevented.

The Walter Reed hospital authorities, with a unique communication read at the hearing, prevented the re-zoning, from residential to commercial of the northeast corner of Georgia avenue and Fifteenth street northwest, where it was intended to install a drug store across the street from the hospital grounds. Four objections to the change were cited by the army officers, as follows:

"It would be undesirable that in the vicinity of an army post, with a largely transient population of young soldiers, regardless of the intentions of the property owners, objectionable characters eventually obtain possession of or occupy old and rent stores and shops to engage in such business as gambling, bootlegging, sale of narcotics, illegal disposition of government property, &c. These enterprises are carried on surreptitiously and successfully by persons who, in the military authorities, to discourage passage and the best cooperation of the police to detect and punish."

"Convalescent and crippled patients would patronize the places and it would be a menace to their limbs and lives in walking the street, owing to the traffic that is constantly passing at that point."

Prey on Patients.

"Patients discharged from the military service for physical or mental infirmities, not sufficient degree to warrant contract to an institution and who are given their final army pay on discharge from the hospital, fall an easy prey to obnoxious characters who, if allowed to do business near the hospital, are familiar with men on the lookout for such cases as described."

"There are at the hospital young women and men undergoing instruction in various schools established here.
Mingling of the sexes is not allowed and can be successfully controlled as now arranged. Such institutions, mentioned, so near the hospital, would provide places where these young women and men could mix with one another and would lead to relationships that would interfere with the work they are performing and doing and mar their efficiency in the hospital and probably cause the dismissal of some."

The following changes in zoning were authorized:

Northeast corner of Minnesota avenue and Foote street northeast, first commercial district. Between C and D west of Twenty-third street northwest, between M and I streets, residential C to second commercial area.

2 Capital Students In University Pageant
